Gerry Brooks, anchor:

General Electric makes the biggest corporate investment ever in UConn. Fairfield-based GE has pledged eleven million dollars over the next five years to help UConn become a leader in E-business and E-engineering. The centerpiece is a ten thousand square foot lab on the Stamford Campus, complete with Twenty First Century technology and cutting edge curriculum.

Denis Nayden (GE Capital Chairman/CEO): GE Capital associates working with UConn students and UConn faculty on real live, every day, e-business projects that will come out of this facility that we're going to implement in my twenty-eight companies.

Governor John Rowland (Connecticut-R): GE you bring good things to light and you bring good things to Connecticut.

Brooks: GE and UConn say roughly a hundred students will benefit each year. GE is the parent company of NBC 30.
